Concept note:

CSF2022 Plenary Session 2 - Friday, February 11th
08:30 am - 09:30 am EST

Transitioning from Talk to Action: Towards a hunger-free, green and just society

Moving from global stocktaking to concrete action, the second plenary session of the Civil Society Forum 2022 will unpack the interlinkages and synergies in policies aimed at eradicating poverty and hunger, while integrating them with action on climate for a green recovery.

There is today solid evidence of the benefits of investing and making peace with nature. The current global crises offer an opportunity to change mindset, reset priorities and redirect resources and attention toward the environment while taking care of food security, resilience and decent jobs. Now more than ever, concern for our planet must be embedded in every aspect of recovery plans.

The session will feature concrete examples of policy implementation at regional and national levels, as well as grassroots projects at local level. The objective is to highlight the importance of including people with lived experiences in decision-making, as well as the need for partnerships in policy development and implementation for the benefit of all. The emphasis will be on sharing experiences on technological innovation in food security, resilience, and green jobs by local indigenous communities with the support of NGOs, UN agencies and/or governments that have resulted in tangible outcomes.

Acknowledging some of the most pertinent issues in our global community today, the panelists will address the integration of both human needs for food security and decent jobs with environmental sustainability.
